EGYPT'S LATEST CONTRIBUTIONS/TO SCIENCE.

THE MUMMIED BEAST

BY HENRY DE VARIGNY. --

The Embalming of Animals.

Some seventy centories ago the Egyptians began to embalm the dead. Viewing their work with delighted eatisfaction—like the hate lamested Penol, who admired work to backs of his pictores—they kept on with it, and embalmed verything that could by book or gook be embalmed. The livrevent Egyptologist who digst the soil of the dol. Nile valley finds it honeycombed with the graves of kings, queen, priest, digitatires, and folk of low degree, while underground Egypt has juileded up its millions and even billions of mommied animals. Many of them found a practical use as fertiliters.

as fartilisers.

From time to time it has occurred to naturalists that these mommied animals would repay stady, and though many of the deposits have been exhibited, M. Mappfor spooraded in secoring remnants of them, and in handing the remnants over to competent naturalists. Hence the beautiful book which MM. Lortet and Galillard of Lyous have brought out under the vittle, "In Faune Momitide de l'Ancienne Vernant".

Animal Pathology.

The natoralist, the anthropologist and the historian will find the book of MM. Lortet and Gaillard full of valuable material, and so will the pathologist, for among the mommied animals of Egypt are specimene that throw light upon animal pathology forty, fifty and even aixty centuries ago, in-some case one can diagnose the diseases the beast died, of. For instance, the spe full victim to tubercolosis then as now. The great malage of modern times existed fig the Nile Valley thousands of years ago, and it doubtlesk killed men as well as monkey. The writer calls it a "ferer-stricken hole, perchad in all the egities of red brick on a bank sorrounded the greater part of the year by vile and stinking marsser, facing a sleggish backwater, lined by hidroes black mad, and an island which is more or less swimp.
